Heliotrope

Native to Peru, heliotrope prefers a rich, well-drained soil in full sun. It is attractive to butterflies and bees. The plant requires a moist soil, but should not be overwatered, which weakens the scent.

Ideal for windowboxes or hanging baskets; anywhere the lovely vanilla and cherry scent can be best appreciated!

Victorian home or garden was complete without a smattering of heliotrope plants. They were probably charmed by its habit of always turning to face the sun; east to west during the day, and back to the east during the night so that it can meet the dawn when it comes.

Perennial (hardy in zones 11+)
